Morning: Session 1: The History of Nursing

The history of nursing is a rich and complex narrative that spans centuries and is deeply intertwined with the development of healthcare systems, social changes, and the evolving role of women in society. Here's a brief overview of key milestones in the history of nursing that we will cover in our conference session today.

Nursing has ancient roots, with evidence of organized care provided by nurses dating back to civilizations such as the Egyptians, Greeks, and Romans.

In ancient Greece, the goddess Hygieia was associated with health, hygiene, and healing, and temples dedicated to her often served as early healthcare facilities.

During the Middle Ages, nursing care was often provided by religious orders and monasteries.

In the 19th Century, notable figures like Florence Nightingale, often referred to as the founder of modern nursing, made significant contributions. She emphasized hygiene, sanitation, and systematic training for nurses.

NURSES FOR NURSES NETWORK

Florence Nightingale's work during the Crimean War in the 1850s marked a turning point in nursing history. Her emphasis on cleanliness and evidence-based practice revolutionized nursing care.

The establishment of the Nightingale Training School for Nurses at St. Thomas' Hospital in London in 1860 marked the beginning of formal nursing education.

The early 20th century saw the professionalization of nursing, with the introduction of standardized nursing curricula and licensure requirements.

World War I and World War II created a significant demand for nurses and further advanced the role of nurses in military and civilian healthcare.

The post-war era witnessed the growth of nursing specialization and the development of advanced practice roles. Nursing organisations, such as the Royal College of Nursing the forerunner of the Australian College of Nursing (ACN), played a crucial role in advocating for nurses' rights and professional standards.

Nursing continues to evolve, with a focus on evidence-based practice, patient-centred care, and technological advancements in healthcare.

Today, nurses work in a wide range of settings, including hospitals, clinics, home healthcare, research institutions, and schools, and they play a vital role in healthcare delivery.

The history of nursing reflects not only the evolution of healthcare but also the changing roles and status of nurses in society. It is a dynamic field that continues to adapt to the ever-changing needs of patients and the healthcare industry.

Session 2: Psychological Wounds : The Invisible Impact of War Nursing” - How working in war zones leaves scars beyond the skin.

Nursing in a war zone is not just about clinical skill – it's about survival of the heart, mind, and spirit. This session explores the unique psychological, emotional, and professional challenges faced by nurses who work in conflict settings. From battlefield hospitals to refugee camps, we examine the moral injuries, ethical dilemmas, and resilience strategies required when care is delivered in chaos.

Reflecting on nursing's historical role in war – from Florence Nightingale at Scutari to modern humanitarian missions – we'll explore how war nursing has shaped not only the profession but also the expectations we carry into modern practice. This is not just a history lesson – it's a human story of courage, cost, and care in impossible circumstances.

Session 3: How the Legacy of War Nursing Shapes Modern Practice" - Why the wounds of nursing history still show up in our workplaces today.

The battlefield may have changed, but the psychological, emotional, and professional challenges faced by nurses remain deeply rooted in our history. This session explores how the legacy of war nursing – courage under fire, stoicism, self-sacrifice, and resilience – has influenced the culture of contemporary nursing for better...and sometimes for worse.

We'll unpack how historical expectations of the “good nurse” (tough, selfless, silent) still echo in today's healthcare environments – contributing to compassion fatigue, burnout, and unrealistic role expectations.

This isn't about blame – it's about awareness. By understanding the professional inheritance we carry, we can consciously reframe nursing identity to support wellbeing, boundaries, and sustainable practice.

Because nurses are still fighting – but the battle looks different now.

Afternoon: Florence Nightingale Museum

Nightingale was the founder of modern nursing, she is still an inspiration to nurses around the globe.

We will visit the museum to celebrate the life of this revolutionary woman; discover all about her affluent childhood, how she fought against her parents' wishes to become a nurse, her work during the Crimean War and how she campaigned for better healthcare for ordinary people.

Morning: WWI Nursing Presentation

During the First World War, more than 3,000 Australian civilian nurses volunteered for active duty. The Australian Army Nursing Service (AANS) was established in July 1903 as a part of the Australian Army Medical Corps. Throughout the war, over 2,000 AANS members served overseas, alongside Australian nurses affiliated with other organizations such as the Queen Alexandra's Imperial Military Nursing Service (QAIMNS), the Red Cross, or privately sponsored facilities.

From the moment of the Gallipoli landings on April 25, 1915, nurses cared for numerous casualties aboard hospital and transport ships anchored off the shore. The wounded arrived continuously, day and night. Some could barely walk, while others were carried on stretchers, often shivering or unconscious due to blood loss. Medical supplies were in short supply, and there was a desperate shortage of fresh water. Despite the constant threat of Turkish shelling or torpedoes, the exhausted nurses diligently cleaned, bandaged, warmed, and provided comfort to their patients, many of whom had severe wounds or suffered from gangrene and disease.

Over the following nine months, soldiers were transported to hospitals on the nearby Greek islands of Imbros and Lemnos or transferred to Malta, Egypt, and Britain.

The lower-deck wards were overcrowded, and poorly ventilated, and even simple nursing tasks became challenging due to the ship's movements. Seasickness affected both nurses and patients.

Afternoon: Visit Troy

Troy, a city that was once believed to be a myth, dates back over 4000 years. Discovered in the 19th century, it is referred to as "Truva" in Turkish and holds the distinction of being a UNESCO World Heritage Site. While the ruins might not be as awe-inspiring as anticipated, they are certainly worth exploring if you're familiar with the legends of the Trojan War or Homer's Iliad.

Morning: "From Ancient Remedies to Modern Medicine: What Have We Kept?" - Exploring the healing practices that shaped healthcare – and why some never really left.

Long before hospitals and pharmaceuticals, healing was grounded in nature, ritual, and community wisdom. Across the ancient world – including here in Turkey – remedies were drawn from plants, water, food, touch, and spirituality.

In this session, we'll explore the ancient health practices of the region – from herbal medicine and bathing rituals to early surgery and spiritual healing. More importantly, we'll ask: what elements of ancient care are still relevant in modern nursing? And what has evidence-based practice quietly reclaimed from history?

This session invites nurses to reflect on their own practice – what ancient wisdom continues to influence how we care, connect, and comfort?

Food as Medicine: The Mediterranean Diet & Lifestyle for Nurses
In a world of fast food and faster workdays, nurses are often the worst at nourishing themselves well. Yet here on the shores of the Aegean – the heartland of the Mediterranean diet – we're reminded that food has always been more than fuel; it's been medicine, connection, and culture.

This session explores the Mediterranean diet not just as a nutritional approach, but as a lifestyle – one that prioritises fresh, seasonal food, mindful eating, connection with others, movement, and balance. Backed by decades of research, the Mediterranean way of living has been shown to reduce the risk of heart disease, cancer, cognitive decline, and burnout.

For nurses, this is not another diet trend – it's a sustainable, evidence-based reminder that how we eat, move, and live profoundly impacts our health and wellbeing – long after the shift ends.

Afternoon: Ephesus Ancient City

Ephesus stands as one of the most extensive archaeological excavations globally, and our exploration will encompass remarkable sites. During our visit, we'll take in the Odeon, The Fountain of Trajan, the steam baths of Scholastica, as well as the temples dedicated to Hadrian and Domitian and the Library of Celsius, an awe-inspiring structure,.

Following this, our attention will turn to The Grand Theatre, the very place where Saint Paul delivered his sermons. Notably, this theatre held the title of the largest in Asia Minor during ancient times, accommodating up to 24,000 spectators.

Our walk through the Ephesus ruins will span approximately 2 hours. We will have a refreshment break at carpet waving village before returning back to the hotel.

Enjoy this day at your leisure exploring Kusadasi.

This rock-cut settlement, where education was given to spread Christianity, has been on the UNESCO World History list since 1985 with its frescoed churches and rock living areas.

Our tour continues to Avanos, one of the oldest settlements of Cappadocia. The pottery art, which is known to have started at the time of the Hittites, still continues, and there are many workshops. This visit includes lunch and a short tour along the Kızılırmak (Red River). Afterward, we will explore the Fairy Chimneys in Pasabag, the most obvious place to visit where these unique landforms are best seen and the common life of humankind and nature. Pasabag, also commonly known as Monks Valley, offers the chance to see the famous mushroom-shaped fairy chimneys as well as St. Simeon's monk cell carved into the rock.

The next destination is Devrent Valley, well known as imagination valley, where we can take fantastic pictures with animal-shaped rock formations. Finally, the tour concludes with a visit to a cooperative in Cappadocia, where world-famous Turkish carpets are produced.

We will learn the intricacies of this thousands-of-years-old art, which is one of the most important features of Turkish culture and a tradition from Central Asia that still continues in Cappadocia.

Cappadocia. Recently, it has become a center of attraction with its hotels carved from the rock. Goreme panorama offers views of the charming village of Goreme.

Our journey continues to Red Valley, an area that attracts attention with its red color in the very center of Cappadocia. The inside of this valley is suitable for walking, and there is a hiking route that lasts approximately 4 km. During this walk in touch with nature, we will see fairy-chimneys, local farms, pigeon houses, and cave chapels. During the valley walk, it is possible to see the different color layers of the volcanic eruption millions of years ago in Cappadocia. The hike finishes at Cavusin Old Greek Village.

We will then explore Love Valley, one of the most well-known and photographed areas of Cappadocia. It attracts attention with its earth shapes and is almost like a natural photography studio.

Afterward, we will make a short visit to Goreme village for a lunch break. Then we will have time to take photos and take a short walk.

Our next destination is Kaymakli Underground City, the trademark of Cappadocia. It is known that there are more than 100 underground cities in the region. These architectural marvels were built from the time of the Hittites to shelter, hide, and sustain life. It is known that the first Christians used these underground cities for a long time to hide from the Arab invasion.

Kaymakli underground city is the biggest and the most visited underground city. Get ready to feel like we are in the stone age.

We will then visit Pigeon Valley, where pigeons have been the most important animal after horses for Cappadocia. It is one of the iconic visiting areas of Cappadocia. The people living in nature have used pigeons as fertilizer in agriculture and pigeon eggs while decorating their churches. The most effective way of permanent fresco was to use pigeon eggs, and this discovery changed both their lives and the pigeons' lives. They built large rock-carved pigeon houses, fed them, and had a common life. Although there are no fresco artists today, this common life continues.

Evening: Farewell cocktails and dinner

We will reflect on all we have learned over the course of this study tour.

We will then share a farewell dinner together, celebrating the fun we have had, and the connections we have made.
